ROANOKE, VA., NOVEMBER 16, 1890.

THE ONLY MORNING NEWSPAPER.

The TIMES gave a full account of the Birchall hanging yesterday morning. This was a case of unusual interest throughout the world.

No other morning paper in Roanoke published a line about it.

There were three terrible railroad wrecks Friday, and Roanokers had to read THE TIMES to get the news from them.

There was a big fire in San Francisco, and you knew nothing of it if you did not read THE TIMES.

Several other important items of news from the wires were printed in THE TIMES that appeared in no other Roanoke paper.

The TIMES is the only paper in Roanoke that prints the news, and from it you can always learn the important happenings of the previous day at your breakfast table.

ROANOKE'S YOUNG MEN.

Roanoke is alive with active, vigorous young manhood, and this, coupled with its magnificent opportunities, has given it the wonderful growth that entitles it to be called the "Magic City."

There is no better indication for the future of any place than the character of its young men. This is doubly true of Roanoke, and the city is happy in the knowledge of that fact.

The younger citizens are moving things with a rush now, and are gathering speed every day.

It is impossible within a short article to mention even the names of the young men who are making Roanoke.

The men who are the recognized leaders in business matters and many of the professions are still young, and the age of forty-five includes the great bulk of the active enterprising business men of the city.

There are but few old men here, and a large part of that few have done their parts nobly.

The TIMES would say nothing to detract from their merited praise, for their younger neighbors have often profited by their wisdom and experience.

The TIMES tips its hat to the young men, and bids them go ahead.

ROANOKE'S CHURCHES.

Roanoke has good church facilities for a young town, and the constantly crowded condition of all the city churches is a good indication. There is a better one, however, in the efforts that are being made to erect more houses of worship.

The church is a refining and elevating influence, whose power can not be estimated.

A city's material prosperity is safer beneath numerous church towers, and Roanoke will not have too many.

THE B. & O. EXTENSION.

What has become of the committee appointed to confer with the authorities of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad about the extension of the road from Lexington to this city?

Roanoke began to talk about this matter, and while Roanoke was talking Lynchburg was acting.

The committee has already received a promise that the authorities will consider the proposition made to them.

Roanoke has delayed too long, but there is still a chance.

The committees appointed by the Commercial Club should immediately lay before the authorities of the road the advantages of the extension to this city over that of any other place.

If the people of Roanoke idly fold their hands, this valuable railroad connection will soon be made with a rival.

If it is a physical impossibility for the present committee to look after the matter entrusted to it, somebody should see that another one is appointed.

If the Baltimore and Ohio is extended from Lexington, Roanoke cannot afford to lose it.

Fix a hospital subscription list tomorrow, and put down your name for all that you are able to give. You will be proud of the act when a respectable hospital cares for suffering men and women in this thriving city.

OUR GOSSIPER.

Summer lingers.

The St. Louis Republic calls attention to the fact that the names of certain remarkable persons are composed of eighteen letters, for example: William Shakespeare, Napoleon Bonaparte, and Christopher Columbus. It will be noticed that our name, "ROANOKE TIMES GOSSIPER," has eighteen letters—and two over.

A young Virginia lady is at work on a silk quilt which she intends to exhibit at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1892. It is composed of hexagons about the size of one's thumb nail and the needle work is exquisite.

Cut flowers may be restored to freshness even if very much withered by placing the stems in boiling water, until the petals have become quite smooth, the ends of the stems should then be cut off and the flower placed in water slightly warm. Rain water is perhaps best.

Enamelled silver jewelry is new and pretty, especially for young girls.

Black and apple green are seen in combination in new costumes.

We caught a glimpse of the contents of the top drawer of a young lady's dressing case yesterday; the drawer was daintily padded with vultured blue satin, and heaped upon it in bewildering confusion were three sailor scarfs, a pink belt, a twenty-five cent cigar with a blue ribbon tied around it, a box of powder for the bath, seven inches of ruching, a pair of black wool mittens, a card case, a lace handkerchief, a piece of unfinished embroidery, a bottle of vaseline, three notes from young men, a cross of brilliants, a recipe for chocolate caramels, three unopened bills from dry goods stores, a paper knife, a black silk stocking, a pink string, an almanac with the date December 10 marked, a button-hook, three hat pins, and electric curler, a faded bouquet, a hand mirror, an old-fashioned brooch, and eleven photographs of young men, one in a white moss velvet case, the others more or less obscured by sprinklings of Remy powder and toilet extracts.

Gloves are not worn in the evening at well private entertainments.

Modé, tan and gray are the fashionable shades in gloves.

It is time for the match-making mamma to be planning for the winter campaign.

Mrs. Henry M. Stanley is exciting as much interest in America as her husband. The New York society women say that her coloring is too vivid, and some one makes the serious charge that she wears her gloves half-buttoned at the theatre.

This is a city of young people—watch the women going to market; nearly all of them are young and vigorous; they look thoughtful, but not careworn. When the offices close in the afternoon, mark the throngs of neatly dressed men in the streets, note the elastic steps, the well-bred air, the bright faces, and the general appearance of prosperity.

Certain fashionable tailors are endeavoring to banish the black dress suit, possibly with a view of drawing a line between the society man in full dress, and the waiter at a fashionable hotel. So radical a change would not be necessary if the exaggerated bow now in vogue among society men and male dining-room servants could be relegated to the latter.

A street dress will keep its shape much longer if it is removed on entering the house. It is economy to have dresses exclusively for home wear.

Stanley, the hero of the Dark Continent is under a slight cloud. Possibly the blows directed at him are such as mediocrity delights to direct against genius and success.

The crocus makes a pretty winter flower and sells at only ten cents a dozen. Fill a deep plate with two inches of sand, set a dozen bulbs on top, water enough to make the sand quite damp and cover with woods moss. Set in a dark place for about four weeks for the bulbs to make roots; then set in a sunny window. As a result, you will have a beautiful window ornament.

Give calla lilies plenty of water if you want them to give you plenty of flowers.

Because fur is Fashion's favorite this season, a few of our ladies have made the mistake of wearing fur capes, highly suggestive of the idea that the summer hall-door mat has become an article of wearing apparel.

A good recipe for banana pie: Take two large bananas, peel and rub them through a colander; add one pint of milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two eggs and a little salt. Bake without a top crust.

Thackeray once said that an American oyster looked like the high priest's car that Peter cut off.

Ward McAllister has fallen.

We heard an ex-farmer say a few days ago that preachers and other public speakers should have the same policy as that used in the corn field. Corn is thinned out in order that the plants allowed to grow shall be more stalwart. It is the same idea in another form as that of Hiesed of old, who said that half is often more than the whole.

A pretty finish to an evening gown is a cluster of small ostrich tips on the shoulder or bust.

It is only those whose position is not assured who are afraid to be seen carrying a bundle on the street or walking with a shabbily dressed acquaintance.

'Twould make a seal blush could he see the seal plush that the ladies insist upon wearing.

Miss Mary Abell, a daughter of the late A. S. Abell, the founder of the Baltimore Sun, has entered a convent at Georgetown, and will become a nun.

If any color is used for infants, let it be blue for boys and pink for girls.

Mr. Samuel O. Trudell, says the Scientific American, has written a book to prove that certain passages in the Book of Job describe the modern steam engine. Mr. Trudell is a good Hebraist and has made his own translations, and it can not be denied that the analogies between the descriptions in chapters forty and forty-one and the steam engine are remarkable.

Some of the best writing in that model of newspapers, the New York Sun, is done by "The Woman About Town." Miss Helen Watterson from Cleveland, Ohio.

The Western papers have much to say about Mrs. Frank Leslie's lecturing tour; she is highly complimented; but we cannot help thinking of rough Dr. Johnson's remarks about feminine oratory: "It is much like a dog's standing on his hind legs—it is not done well; but, sir, we are surprised to find it done at all."

It is very bad form to leave a theatre or opera house between acts.

Wants an Injunction.

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special]—The National Typographic Company and the Mergenthaler Printing Company, owners and manufacturers of the Mergenthaler Linotype machine, to-day filed a petition in the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, asking for an injunction against the new New York Typograph Company and others, to restrain them from the use of the Roger's typograph machine. An injunction is asked for on the ground of infringement of patents. A motion for a preliminary injunction has been placed on the calendar for next Friday.

RICHLANDS.

Last April we began to advertise our town lots, making at that time a number of statements in regard to what we would do. Through the non-completion of the Clinch Valley extension of the Norfolk and Western our railroad facilities at that time were very limited. We had no railroad station and, indeed, one old farmhouse was the total sign of life about the place. Since then the railroad has erected a fine brick and stone freight station, one of the largest on the road, and will shortly erect a fine passenger station, while the Clinch Valley Company has spent, or is under contract to expend, $350,000. A four-story hotel, the finest in Southwest Virginia, is under roof; a handsome iron bridge, of 180 feet span, crosses the Clinch river; two second-class hotels have been built, and a large number of stores are building under contract. The company has erected a handsome three-story building for its offices, and a fine stone bank building is nearing completion. Machinery for the rolling mill is on the grounds, and the track to the coal mines, three miles away, is completed, and coal is now coming out. A steam brick plant, the most complete in Southwest Virginia, is in operation, and a large amount of grading and other work is going on. This work attracts a great deal of attention, while Richlands is merely at the end of a non-completed line. The completion of the Clinch Valley division this fall, and the running of through trains between Washington and Louisville, putting Richlands immediately on a through line, will give an impetus to the prosperity of the town sufficient to throw it ahead of all competitors, and the attention of investors is called to real estate here as giving greater promise than any town in Southwest Virginia.
